The Australian university system was gearing up for an exercise in measuring the social, cultural and economic benefit of academic research through the planned Research Quality Framework (RQF) till 2007. The new government went in another direction with the Excellence in Research for Australia initiative. In the UK, an impact component has been built into the new Research Excellence Framework, to some extent based on that, which was being developed for the RQF. Now, an ATN-Go8 trial, and a feasibility study into the introduction of an impact measure, are being developed in Australia. Is this a positive move? What are the opportunities and threats for the arts, social sciences and humanities in this development?

2:40 PM RESUME PROGRESS REPORTS

4. Sharing of resources around:

3:30 PM GUEST SPEAKER: PRIVACY IN NETWORKED PLACES

Dr. Danah Boyd, Senior Researcher, Microsoft Research and Assistant Professor, New York University

(Research Lounge – Building 8, Level 5)

There is a widespread myth that young people don't care about privacy. Embedded in this myth is an assumption that participation in public social media like Facebook and Twitter indicates a rejection of privacy. Yet, just because people want to participate in public life doesn't mean that they want everything they do to go down on their permanent record or to be publicized for the whole world to see. This talk will examine how young people understand privacy and the strategies they take to achieve privacy in networked publics.

5.00 PM CONCLUDE FOR THE DAY

7.00 PM DINNER - ABLA'S LEBANESE RESTAURANT

AGENDA - Friday 10 February

9:00 AM GUEST SPEAKER: THE HUMANITIES AND SOCIAL SCIENCES IN AUSTRALIA
TODAY: CONJECTURES AND PROVOCATIONS

Emeritus Professor Ian Hunter, University of Queensland

(Emily Mac Multipurpose room – Building 13, Level 3, Room 7)

Often discussions of the humanities and social sciences are conducted by invoking the twin themes of crisis and relevance. In this talk I use some historical reflections to suggest that the HSS don't have the kind of unity that might make them relevant (or irrelevant) to society conceived as some kind of whole. The HSS consist of a loose and changing ensemble of disciplines and intellectual and ethical practices whose current condition and future prospects need to be discussed in this disaggregated way. I offer a sketch in these terms. Such unity as the HSS do possess lies at the level of their institutional ordering in the university and in the larger governmental programs responsible for this ordering today.
